

Immune system support and the magic mushroom

The alarming increase in anti-biotic resistant viruses, staph infections and life-threatening strains of influenza that have surfaced in recent years has prompted Western medicine to join its Eastern counterpart in raising public awareness about the importance of strengthening the immune system in order to avoid falling victim to these pernicious threats to our health.

According to medical experts the war against previously unknown viral diseases, pathogenic microorganisms and environmental pollutants, is one of the most serious health issues faced in modern times.

The strategy of increasing our immunological defenses in order to avoid becoming sick thus eliminating the need for curative treatment, is not coincidentally the most fundamental guiding principle of the 5,000 year-old traditional Chinese medical system. Dating all the way back to the second century when it was first mentioned in the Ben Cao Jing an herbal treatise written by the creator of Chinese Herbology, the Emperor Shen Nong. The herb Ling Zhi Cao, aka Ganoderma or Reishi Mushroom has enjoyed the veneration of the Chinese people for its immune enhancing properties, which are known to increase white blood cells and stimulate the production of antibodies that are essential to protecting our bodies against pathogenic invasions.

In addition to its extensive use in Chinese medicine, the wild Chinese mushroom Ling Zhi Cao's extraordinary ability to nourish and strengthen the immune system (what the Chinese call the Wei Chi), has garnered the attention of Western medical science in its search for a viable treatment for patients who suffer from auto-immune deficiency (AIDS/ HIV).

In fact, Ling Zhi Cao is by some estimates the most powerful immune system strengthening botanical ingredient in both Eastern and Western Herbology!

At seaofchi.com we highly recommend the daily use of Ling Zhi Cao because we recognize the wisdom in the adage that "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure."

Ling Zhi's effectiveness can be attributed to the herb's ability to stimulate the production of antibodies that fortify immunity as well as increasing the white blood cell count -- which is the body's first line of defense against viral infections.
