

Let us make your prostate disease a thing of the past

Prostate enlargement, also called benign prostatic hypertrophy, is simply an increase in the size of the prostate gland, for which there is no known cause. Usually affecting men over fifty, symptoms gradually develop as the enlarging prostate presses on the urethra, which obstructs the flow of urine. Normally, sufferers experience difficulty starting urination, and once started, the stream or flow is weak. Over-development of the bladder muscle (in order to force the urine through the obstructed urethra) can cause swelling in the lower abdomen. There may be incontinence due to overflow of small quantities of urine, or the bladder may become overactive, which will result in frequent urination. Severe abdominal pain and the ability to pass only a few drops of urine indicate acute urinary retention and require immediate treatment.

Chinese herbal therapy has been fairly successful in treating prostate enlargement, yet it is important to undergo a digital rectal examination to confirm the diagnosis since there has been some speculation concerning a relationship between this condition and prostate cancer.

Prostatitis is the inflammation of the prostate gland. It is usually caused by bacterial infection that has spread from the urethra. The infection may or may not be sexually transmitted. Presence of a urinary catheter increases the risk of prostatitis. Anyone with frequently recurring prostate infections would be well advised to investigate the cause.

Two Chinese formulas noted for their ability to effectively treat these conditions (enlarged prostate and prostatitis) are Xiao Ji Yin Zi and Ba Zheng San Wan. Their use is preferable to the standard Western medical treatment of antibiotic drugs requiring long-term use which can be undesirable because of compromised immunity and with which there is a high rate of recurrence.

What makes these herbs so effective?

XIAO JI YIN ZI

This raw herb formula is used to treat prostate enlargement with painful and frequent urination, and will relive painful abdominal swelling. Xiao Ji Yin Zi is a powerful formula that uses potent herbs (small thistle plant, gardenia fruit, angelica, Chinese foxglove, lotus, cattail pollen, talcum, and bamboo) to produce an effective brew that is said to be the most comprehensive product on the market today. Men concerned about their prostate health should take a proactive approach to long-term prostate health, and Xiao Ji Yin Zi can be used for long periods of time to insure proper prostate function. It comes as powdered herb, which can be made into capsules or mixed into your favorite smoothie or juice.

COST: one 62 gram herb pack costs $19.99, this is a 15 day supply, and we discount on long-term usage with four packs costing $76.99.

BA ZHENG SAN WAN

Would you prefer the convenience of using pills? Then go with another excellent formula Ba Zheng San, which is useful for chronic and difficult cases of, enlarged prostate; it will clear infection and promote easy flowing urination, while it relieves pain and resolves prostatitis. The chief ingredient in this formula is Mu Tong (wood with holes) which is a powerful herb used to combat infection. Ba Zheng San also contains herbs that will harmonize the functioning of the prostate and clear up prostatitis (such as plantago seed, knotweed, gardenia, licorice, and talcum). Traditional Chinese medicine recommends the daily use of Ba Zheng San to promote the proper functioning of the prostate gland.
